— OBSERV El debe traducirse a menudo por el adjetivo posesivo en inglés: llevaba el sombrero puesto he had his hat on; extendió el brazo he stretched out his arm. Cuando antecede un día de la semana, se traduce por on: vino el lunes, me irá el viernes he came on Monday, I shall leave on Friday, excepto en casos similares a los siguientes: el lunes pasado, el lunes que viene last Monday, next Monday; el lunes es mal día Monday is a bad day. Tampoco se suele usar el artículo en inglés delante de los nombres de países: el Japón, el Perú Japan, Peru, y en otros muchos casos: me gusta el té I like tea; está en el hospital he is in hospital; en el Madrid actual in present-day Madrid; el capitán X captain X.

— OBSERV In proper names like El Greco, El Escorial the article is never contracted to al or del: un cuadro de El Greco, voy a El Escorial.

— OBSERV El replaces the feminine article before a word beginning with accentuated a or ha (el ala, el hacha).

él pron pers m sing he (personas); él viene he is coming || he, him (enfático); es él it is he, it is him (véase OBSERV) || him (complemento, si se trata de personas); hablo de él I am talking about him; trabajo con él I work with him || it (cosas); se me olvidó el pañuelo y no puedo prescindir de él I forgot my handkerchief and I can't manage without it || — de él his (persona), its (cosa) (suyo); el coche es de él his car; este coche es de él this car is his || él mismo himself; lo dijo él mismo he said it himself.

— OBSERV Él, as the subject, is usually omitted before the verb: (él) se marchó he left. It is generally only included either to avoid ambiguity or to add emphasis; the latter may be conveyed in English by stressing he: él se fue, yo me quedé he left, I remained.

— OBSERV Cuando él se emplea con el verbo ser se traduce frecuentemente en inglés por el pronombre complemento him aunque sea incorrecto desde un punto de vista puramente gramatical.
